DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS. FOR PRESIDENT,

PARECEN VAN BRUERON. FOR VICE PRESIDENT, REICHARRED NE. JOHN NSON.

FOR GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS, MARCUS MORTON. FOR LIEUT. GOVERNOR, WILLIAM FOSTER.

COURT ETIQUETTE.

From the New York Evening Post.

Reader, we take the liberty to place thee, this after-noon, in judgement on one of the gravest and most mo-and hospitalities of the Royal Family of France. mentous questions which ever was decided by mortal wit. Hereto we append the documents necessary to the understanding of this important case, and beg of thee to "awake thy senses that thou mayst be the better To his Excellency, Edward Livingston, Esq. judge." Ask us not how these documents came into our possession; but let it suffice that we have authority to refer the intricate and weighty question at issue unto thee for decision, and to inform thee that, peradventure, as thou decidest, so will decide the whole world.

Excellency, Mr Livingston, asks the favour of him to I could not have the slightest objection, I dil not think include his and Mrs Jauncey's name on the list for presentation at Court, which he is informed will take place subject had already, in various ways, obliged me to give Rue d'Astrog, 22d December.

Mr Livingston regrets that it is entirely out of his power to comply with Mr Jauncey's request, as the list for presentation has been some time since closed and presented.

Monday morning.

Rue D'Astrog, No. 6, 25th December, 1834.

Dear Sir :- My son, James Jauncey, had the honour to address a note to your Excellency on the 22d instant, asking the favour that his and Mrs Jauncey's names might be included in your list for presentation at Court, to which you have been pleased to reply, that it had of the Aids des Camps of his Majesty, also one of the Dames d'honneur of the Queen, to acquaint you, that it is the usual and acknowledged practice of foreign Ministers at this Court, to add, at pleasure, to their list, up to the day of presentation, and that the day for the purpose has not yet been fixed by the Court; therefore I now reiterate the request of my son, in the full persuasion that you will not designingly withhold his privilege as a citizen of the United States.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, Your obedient, humble servant, HERMAN THORN. To his Excellency, Edw. Livingston, Esq., Envoy Ex. & Min. Pien'y. from the U. States.

clining to comply with it.

The trouble you have taken to inform me of the usages of the Court was a useless one; I am sufficiently acquainted with them, but must be allowed to judge of the occasion on which it would be proper to avail myself of the facilities they afford. Although I might be dispensed from entering into any further explanations, I will add, that at the time I received Mr. Jauncey's application, my list for presentation was quite as large as I thought discretion would permit me to make it; and similar requests from others of my fellow citizens, had, for that reason, been refused.

I am. Sir. (Signed) Mr. Thorn.

Your most obt. serv't, EDW. LIVINGSTON.

RUE D' ASTROG,

26 December, 1834. Dear Sir:-I fear there has been some mistake in the terms of my note respecting the presentation, which I should extremely regret, as I hope you know me too well to suppose I could intentionally offend so obliging

Your explanation is in every way satisfactory, and convinces me that I have no occasion to alter the opinion I had already formed as to the straight-forward and gentlemanlike feelings that dictated it. But, as some dissatisfaction is liable to be felt by our fellow citizens who have families like myself, by lying at the "discretion" and "courtesy" of future American Ministers, whose manner might be less conciliating than your own, to present them at foreign Courts, I think I may rely on your disinterestedness, that you will rather approve than object to my sending home a copy of our present corres-

HERMAN THORN. To his Excellency, Edw. Livington, Esq. Envoy Ex. & Min. Plen'y, from the U. States. REU D' ASTROG, No. 6,

3d January, 1835. Dear Sir :- Not having been favored with any notice of the letter which I had the honor of addressing to your Excellency on the 26th December, I am almost afraid it may have given some fresh offence. Allow me here with every deference, to submit a few thoughts on the merits of the case purely as a public question. Though I am convinced the omission of my son and daughter-in-law's names from the list of presentation could not have the most remote connexion with design or unkindness, yet who can answer for a future Minister, that the exclusion of our fellow citizens might not proceed from the most wanton caprice. It might be some foul instigation of the passions, or of an enemy; ay, or even the whim of a mistress or a wife. Such things, we know, have happened, and we surely are justified to try and guard against American gentlemen being placed in a position to have their feelings trifled with, if not themselves looked down upon by gentlemen of other nations. The subjects of a monarchy are saved from this, since if they have been presented at their own est manner, by DAVID RUE, May's court, Belknap street. court, their application to be presented at a foreign one cannot be refused. Whether some equivalent arrangement might not be made under a Republic it is not for me to say, but it appears to me the matter is worthy of being submitted. You will therefore probably have no objection to transmit a copy of our correspondence to the Secretary of State, as I mean to do to-morrow by the ordinary conveyance. Your letter to me is a volume of evidence and weighty authority on the bearings

There is rather a striking misapprehension in your letter. In reply to my note conveying the information I received on the subject of presentations, you say I a courtesy; now, surely, if I had thought the presentaa courtesy; now, surely, if I had thought the presentation could have been demanded as a right, I should have so demanded it, at once, without troubling your.

can demand it as a right, that, as a public document, I regarded your letter so valuable in showing it ought to be no longer a matter of courtesy.

I must beg your Excellency will dismiss from your mind all idea that it is any personal feeling which dictates this step. Your treatment of my family, be assured, has no other than an accidental connection with the present purpose, of which it is some time since I first conceived the idea, suggested by the complaints of others similarly circumstanced with myself. Right or wrong, I consider it a duty I owe to my fellow citizens. It may not be out of place, before I conclude, just to observe, in passing, that your reception or exclusion of my own special family from your list of Court presentatation, could not very materially affect me, as we have

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1835.

Ohio and Michigan .- The Convention of the people of Michigan, recently assembled at Detroit, for the of resolutions, and an appeal to the people of the U. States, upon the boundary question, which breathe a commendable spirit of peace and forbearance.

The resolutions assert that no obstruction or impediment, will or ought in the opinion of the Convention, to be interposed by the people or authorities of the territory, to prevent the running or re-marking of "Harris's Line," nor any prosecutions instituted therefor, provided the same be not accompanied on the part of Ohio, by any other exercise of jurisdiction. But it is also expressly declared by the Convention, on the part of the people, that "while they are disposed to make this effort at conciliation, they are determined to assert their own jurisdiction by all the lawful means in their power." Copies of these resolutions were directed to be transmitted to the President of the United States, to ion, and even the national existence of a now happy distinct charge, viz. trafficking in slaves on the coast of the Governor of Ohio, and to the Speaker of the Senate and of the House of Representatives of that State.

The Appeal claims that if the principles acted upon by Ohio are once practically established, there will be no security for the State governments; that they would fall in succession, one after the other, and that the consummation would be the establishment of a consolidated government. The Territory has always contended, and yet contends, that Congress has no power to act upon this subject, as solicited to do by the State of Ohio-that the ordinance of 1787, and the act establishing the territory of Michigan, prescribed its boundaries-and that these acts, committing in express terms the national faith, place the matter beyond the reach of the federal legislature, and that Congress might, with equal justice, change the boundaries of any State in the siderable quantity of manuscripts to be published after tion of the Marshal from New York.

to concur in the views of Ohio, is a practical decision | terious expedition to Mexico. upon her application, in favor of Michigan-inasmuch as Ohio asked for a recognition of her claims, and Michigan objected to that recognition, on the ground that the boundary is already fixed, and that, consequently, Congress has no authority in the case. Since the adjournment of Congress, Ohio has withdrawn her case from the jurisdiction of the National Legislature, and undertaken to decide on her own pretensions, and to apply her own remedy-she has abandoned the ground of supplication, and "assumed a tone of menace and insolence." Her commissioners, with the necessary assistants, and a number of armed men, proceeded to survey the line and extend the jurisdiction of the State over the disputed territory, in defiance of an act of the legislative council of Michigan, pronounced by the Attorney General of the United States to be constitutional, which rendered the attempt to run this line, if made by any other than persons under the authority of the territory or of the U. States, a penal offence. Under this act, the usual judicial process was issued by a justice of the peace—some of the persons were apprehended and held to answer for the offence. One of the persons so arrested was rescued, and this act led to two or three prosecutions, in the ordinary manner, before the judicial tribunals, and the execution of process was effected by the civil officers, who called out a part of the power of the county. Further than this, no force has been used by the authorities of the Territory, and not a single soldier called into the field. Should Ohio make another and more vigorous attempt to obtain possession of the disputed territory, the Convention are of opinion that the provisions of the constitution and laws would render it the duty of the President of the U. States to order out a competent force for the support of the law.

The inhabitants of Michigan are anxious for a peaceable settlement of their difficulties with Ohio. They renew, through the Convention, their expressions made in their memorial to the President, of their entire readiness to obtain a decision in any just mode. They will join the State of Ohio in endeavoring to bring the question immediately before the Supreme Court of the U. States-they will submit it to the decision of commissioners, to be mutually selected by the parties-or refer from any part of the Union.

Among other presentations at the late drawing room views of "the Taunton Union for the relief and im- terday, to decide upon a point of conflicting jurisdiction of the Queen, was the Countess of Mount-Cashell-but her ladyship is worth a fresh paragraph.

Twelve years ago Lord Kilworth (eldest son of the Earl of Mount Cashell, an Irish peer,) was travelling on the Barrett to End William the continent, on the magnificent allowance of 500 dol- Herrick. lars a year! His mother, it seems, was at Paris after the peace of Amiens, and when Napoleon suddenly detained the English residents, on the breaking out of the war, he did not detain the Earl. The Countess Mount Cashell (not the present Countess,) was one of the finest women of her day, and we all know that Fig. Napoleon was a man of taste. It was whispered that her ladyship w s a voluntary detenue. But, then, people will say such things!

In a word, her figure gave assurance of an increase to her family. You know that Coming events cast their shadows before.' Well the countess had a young son, and, by a curious accident, it bore the most astonishing resemblance to the Emperor Napoleon. That resemblance continues to this day, for I know the gentleman. The Emperor signified his wish to become God-father to the infantscandalous tongues said he was little more related-and the lad was called "Napoleon Bonaparte Moore."-The name of Moore is the family apellation of the noble family of Mount Cashell.

We now come back to Lord Kilworth :- his father the old Earl, repudiated his wife, and refused to see any of his children. He sent Lord Kilworth to France to be educated, and from his 9th year to his 28th, the future Earl, and heir to an annual income of $200,000, was compelled to live on $500 a year. He was taken ill at an auberge in Switzerland-was carefully tended by the inkeeper's daughter-was very grateful-allowed gratitude to swell to love-married her, and, in a week, received intimation that by the death of his father he was become Earl of Mount Cashell :- of course, the Swiss peasant girl became Countess of Mount Cashell. The Earl is a handsome man-his lady one of the ugliest pieces of mortality I ever saw. But they are truly attached, and have a fine young family. This is the lady whose presentation at Court has excited some tic,

A letter from Capt Russell of ship Omega, dated at Batavia March 7, states that the ship struck on what appeared to be a small patch of coral, about 50 yards wide and 100 yards long, not laid down in the latest charts and entirely an unknown danger. The ship remained on the shoal 25 hours, during which time she made no water, and continues tight—lost her udder and 1 chain cable.
